THE COMPLEX INTERNATIONAL CONTEXT IS A CHALLENGE FOR THE ABOLITIONIST MOVEMENT

With 140 countries and territories having abolished the death penalty in law or practice, and a decreasing number of countries carrying out executions, abolition appears to be a universal trend. Since the World Congress in Madrid, a number of victories have been claimed in the fight for abolition, and many retentionist countries have either abolished the death penalty in practice, or have restricted its use to certain crimes or certain categories of people. Four countries should be commended for putting an end to the death penalty over the course of 2015: the Republic of the Congo, Fiji, Madagascar, and Surinam.

Over the past ten years, however, many countries have passed counterterrorist laws which expand the scope of the death penalty. Recently, Pakistan, Jordan, and Chad resumed executions under the banner of the fight against terrorism, revoking a moratorium which had been in place for years.

In 2015, at least 1,634 prisoners were executed across 25 countries, and 1,998 people were sentenced to death across 61 countries, a record for the past 25 years. In that landscape, the advance of the abolitionist trend still encounters great resistance across Asia and the Arab world. Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and Iran were responsible for 89% of recorded executions in 2015. Those figures don’t take China into account, where information pertaining to the death penalty is classified as State secret.

Particular attention was given to Southeast Asia in 2015, and the Regional Congress Against the Death Penalty was held in Malaysia. To ensure a follow-up, Asia will be given a prominent place during the World Congress, with a plenary session dedicated to the progress and setbacks of our cause on the Asian continent.

In countries where the death penalty is abolished in law, abolition is regularly called into question by pro-death penalty movements. Citizens and human rights organisations fighting against the death penalty often face huge political, legal, and religious barriers. The support from National Human Rights Institutions (NHRI) in the abolitionist struggle is therefore crucial and must be accentuated to achieve sustainable goals. That is why the second plenary session will be dedicated to them.

We must now hope that the march forward, which was halted in 2015, can kick on stronger than ever. 2016 is looking promising: rumours of abolition are emanating from Guinea and Burkina Faso. Mongolia has just made abolition official after its Parliament voted an amendment to its Penal Code.

The 6th World Congress Against the Death Penalty, organised by ECPM, will be an unmissable chance to give new impetus to the movement and to continue our journey towards universal abolition!
Since 2001, Together Against the Death Penalty (ECPM) organises the World Congresses Against the Death Penalty. These international events bring together thousands of members of civil society, political representatives, lawyers and journalists from the five continents with the aim of developing new strategies for universal abolition.

After Strasbourg in 2001, Montreal in 2004, Paris in 2007, Geneva in 2010 and Madrid in 2013, Oslo is hosting the 6th World Congress from June 21 to 23, 2016. It is organised by ECPM, under the sponsorship of Norway, France and Australia and in partnership with the World Coalition Against the Death Penalty.

Sunny was wrongfully tried, convicted and sentenced to death in Florida, USA in 1976. She spent five years under sentence of death in solitary confinement before her death sentence was overturned. She then spent a further 12 years among the general prison population to whom she began to teach yoga. With the help of lawyers who worked for many years without pay and friends who assisted them in the research, Sunny had her conviction overturned in 1992 and achieved her liberty.

Peter was wrongfully prosecuted, tried and convicted of capital murder and robbery by the non-jury Special Criminal Court in Dublin, Ireland, in 1980. He was sentenced to death and to 15 years imprisonment. In 1981, his death sentence was commuted to 40 years penal servitude without remission. He studied law and prepared his case under the Irish Constitution. He opened his case in the High Court in Dublin in January 1992 representing himself. He won his freedom in 1995.

Byson Kaula was arrested in 1992 for the death of one of his employees who was serious ill and after being held on remand for 7 years, he was convicted of murder and sentenced to the mandatory death penalty. In prison he developed prisoner education programs and quickly became known as “the professor” for his work teaching life skills to his fellow prisoners. After 23 years in prison he was released in early 2015 and resided at the Prison Fellowship Malawi, a residence that helps newly released prisoners reintegrate into society. Byson has since then left the residence but now volunteers as a teacher and a chaplain during the PFM’s prison visits.
Suzan was arrested in 2000 and sentenced to death in 2002. While in prison, she founded a school with the support of Uganda Prison Services and joined herself, completing her studies with excellency. African Prison Project chose her and sponsored her distance-learning education from the University of London. In partnership with the NGO FHRI, Suzan led the death penalty petition in Uganda’s Constitutional courts which is famously known as Suzan Kigula & 417 Others. The petition found mandatory death sentences unconstitutional. Suzan came out of prison on January 2016. She is currently finalizing her Law degree.

Celia Veloso is the mother of Mary Jane Veloso who was arrested in Indonesia for drug trafficking and was sentenced to death in October 2010. Her family, together with the NGO Migrante International, launched a campaign to save Mary Jane, asserting that she is innocent and is actually a victim of human trafficking. In April 2015, Mary Jane had been transferred to a holding cell, prior to her imminent execution. A last-minute turnaround saved her from execution, but her life is still on the line and Celia Veloso is tirelessly working for Mary Jane’s freedom.

Ndume Olatushani is 56 years old. In 1983 he was charged with a shooting death during a holdup. He was wrongfully convicted and sentenced to death. After countless appeals, in 2004 Ndume was re-sentenced to life in prison, and moved off death row. He was released after entering the Alfort plea: he gave up his exemption, which allowed him to be released immediately, but is still considered guilty despite his innocence. He was released in 2012 and took part to the Windows on death row project.

Lubov Kovaleva is an active member of the coalition “Human Rights Defenders Against the Death Penalty in Belarus”. In 2012, she was awarded the Human Rights Defender Prize for her active support to her son Vladislav Kovalev and for her fight against the death penalty. Found guilty of collaborating with terrorists after the explosion in Minsk subway in April 2011, Vladislav Kovalev was sentenced to death penalty in a hasty trial marred with irregularities in November 2011. The execution took place in March 2012 while his individual complaint filed by Lubov Kovaleva was still being considered by the UN Human Rights Committee.

ECPM (TOGETHER AGAINST THE DEATH PENALTY)

Since 2000, we have been fighting against the death penalty worldwide by uniting and rallying abolitionist forces across the world. We advocate with international bodies and encourage universal abolition through education, information, and public awareness campaigns. We strengthen the capacities of abolitionist actors and act alongside them on a local scale.

2016

ECPM reaches a major milestone by obtaining consultative status with the United Nations Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC), granting it access to UN institutions in Geneva (Human Rights Council), New York (United Nations Headquarters and Security Council), and Vienna (UNODC—United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime).

2015
CAMPAIGN FOR SERGE ATLAOUI AND ALL DEATH ROW PRISONERS IN INDONESIA
When Indonesia resumes executions, ECPM rallies around to prevent the execution of Serge Atlaoui, a French citizen sentenced to death in Indonesia. Following weeks of campaigning, and the execution of 8 more people, Serge Atlaoui narrowly avoids death.

2012
1ST REGIONAL IN RABAT
ECPM organises the 1st Regional Congress in Rabat in order to lobby the highest echelons of power in a region of the world where the death penalty remains a major issue in society.

2001
1ST WORLD CONGRESS IN STRASBOURG
ECPM positions itself as the uniting organisation for all abolitionist forces from across the world and organises the 1st World Congress Against the Death Penalty in Strasbourg. The event is then held every three years.

2000
CREATION OF THE ORGANISATION
Michel Taube and Benjamin Menasce publish a book, An Open Letter to Americans for the Abolition of the Death Penalty, followed by a campaign, "Together Against the death Penalty in the USA" which gathers 500,000 signatures in France. This show of strength leads to the creation of the ECPM organisation.
THE WORLD COALITION AGAINST THE DEATH PENALTY

An alliance of more than 150 NGOs, bar associations, local authorities and unions, was created in Rome on 13 May 2002. It was founded as a result of the commitment made by the signatories of the Final Declaration of the First World Congress Against the Death Penalty organised by the French NGO Together Against the Death Penalty (ECPM) in Strasbourg in June 2001.

The aim of the World Coalition is to strengthen the international dimension of the fight against the death penalty by lobbying international organisations and States, by organising international campaigns, including the World Day Against the Death Penalty and by supporting national and regional abolitionist forces.
